One of my favorite artists who inspires me is Richard Diebenkorn. In his paintings he creates strong geometrical shapes, color and linear lines to define his land and seascapes. I consider myself a Contemporary Urban Abstract Painter. I am captivated with texture, line, color, design and shape that are the aesthetics of the urban environment. When I am out exploring and find old, decayed building facades, pipes, a freeway intersection, or a decrepit fence, this inspires me. As a prolific and intuitive painter, I am always experimenting with new materials and textures extending its' possibilities on several different surfaces, to make things up and take outrageous creative risks. Intuitive painting teaches us that there is a holy wisdom in allowing ourselves to be led and guided by whatever shows up on the paper or canvas in front of us. To let go of the common conceptions we know and open fully to the unknown. To making what is unconscious conscious and to trust what resides in oneself.
