I feel a deep connection to the natural world. My goal is to connect people to the beauty of nature through art. In these digital times, it is easy to forget and even resist, that we are part of natural forces. Art can help us become more conscious of our true relationship with nature. The natural environment always inspires and surprises me and I aim to capture it through the use of color, bold brush strokes and eliminate unnecessary details. Oil paints allow me to create interesting color combinations, build layers and scrape them down to trigger positive emotional responses from the viewers. This small series is inspired by plants in my garden and one of my favorite artist Georgia O'Keeffe. I placed a contemporary spin on these painting by adding geometric shapes in the background.
